

The Exodus of Being: Reflections on A Shipwrecked Life

By Saitya Brata Das

Aakar Books, Delhi, 2017. Hardcover. Condition: New. Today our existence is shipwrecked more than ever before. All the values that hitherto governed our life have now lost their sense and ground. Bereft of any dwelling, our existence is thrown on the desert of exodus. Today the philosopher no longer dares to provide maxims - pure forms of universality - that can be filled up specific acts, or from which specific acts can be deluded. This can either be an occasion of despair or joy; this can also be an occasion to seize the lightning flash of beatitude liberated from constraints of the law. Having to undergo a shipwrecked life and surviving it can truly be an-archic life, life given to the perils of the sea and to its demonic weather, without certitude. We dont have to think this perild of temporality as a dialectical passage that continuously gives us back the identical and the necessary. What we need to think is the radical contingency of the event that gives us, without necessity, the possibility and actuality of the wholly otherwise. This book is a collaboration of a writer with an artist. Together they reflect, and yet each on his and...
