RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 64 pages. Original publisher: Champaign, IL : US Army Corps of Engineers, Construction Engineering Research Laboratories ; Springfield, VA : National Technical Information Service, distributor, 1999 OCLC Number: ocm42757775 Subject: Fences -- Security measures. Excerpt: . . . 14 USACERL TR 99 28 3 Description of Barrier Fencing Primary Barriers Landing Mat This fence is composed of surplus carbon steel landing mats, 12-ft long, 20-in. wide, 1 4-in. thick (dimensions approximate). For each mile, 3, 080 panels are used. Landing mats are welded to 3 to 6 in. (various) steel well-casing pipes buried to a depth of 8 ft every 6 ft along the fence. Landing mats are stored sur-plus and are available without cost to the project. Currently, roughly 14 miles of this fence is installed along the border in the San Diego District, with enough panels in surplus to construct an additional 60 to 90 miles of fencing. Some ar-eas also include an anti-tunneling measure to prevent entry underneath the fence. The measure is subsurface steel panels (often damaged landing mat un-suitable for fencing) set in a concrete matrix along the fence line to a depth of 2 to 3 ft. The U. S. Army Reserves are responsible for the construction of new fence, and the U. S. Border Patrol is responsible for its M and R. Terrain topo-graphic concerns are minimized because of ease of installation. The landing mat fence (shown in Figure 1) is one of the few designs where sig-nificant long-term experience has been gained for its application. Although its installation was an impressive effort in response to the mission needs of the Bor-der Patrol, the benefit of functional experience offers some lessons learned. An...
