Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: .He wanted some one all his own, to whom he would be the essential person in life; some one for whom he in his turn could work; whom he could make happy. Then later there would be his children to live and work for. He would like to have children of his own, several children: and they should have opportunities that had been denied to him. He could find satisfaction in making money, if he could spend it on making his wife and children happy. He turned to find the engineer beside him on the staging. Blowing up for wet, the engineer remarked and spat heedlessly from the vast height of the derrick down into the remote cavern of the excavation out of which the swarms of workmen were laboriously raising the great erection of the new building. His spittle drifted down into invisibility long before it had reached its casual goal. Are you married? asked Stephen suddenly. Ah! married this twenty year, the engineer replied. And children? A round half dozen, the engineer said. Me eldest boy s down there working on the sump; goin to be a bigger man than his father, so e says; but I tell im e s at the very bottom o this job and I m at the top, an it ll take im a long time afore he gets as igh as I am. The engineer laughed with gusto at his own joke, and sent another missile down...
