Forgotten Books, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from Views in Philadelphia, and Its Vicinity: Engraved From Original Drawings Originally the windows of the front and anks of the church, of which there are two rows, were formed with leaden sash, somewhat in the Gothic style; indeed it would seem from the disposition and general arrangement of the various parts of the whole edifice, that a Gothic model had been kept in view by its projectors as far as respects some of the details of its external and interior distribution. The high pitched roof, surrounded by piers and balusters; the subdivision of the anks with pilasters, together with the columnar separation of the nave and side aisles of the interior, indicate strongly some of the leading features of a Gothic model. The proportions of the steeple particularly are good; it was erected from a design by Robert Smith, about 1745 but there are unquestionably many crudities in the details of the building, which mark an era of profusion in architecture that belonged to the anglo-palladian school in the reign of George the Second.
