FBC LTD, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The American Legion Weekly, Vol. 7: July 10, 1925 Of the two million Americans who found their way to France in 1917 and 1918, how many would like to go back on a visit? Of the two million Americans who were ready to go to France when the Armistice cancelled their reservations, how many would like to go now? The American soldier and the American sailor did not go to France in 1917 and, 1918 to pay a party call. It was strictly a business trip. The business to be done was so pressing that little time was left for social engagements. And, the business once done, most of the A. E. F. Was glad to be off for home. France doubtless was equally happy to see the A. E. F. Go. The average householder is glad to. See the firemen take their departure after they have put out a fire in his house. A good part of France s house was burned during the war, and when the A. E. F. Left the furniture was still piled on the lawn. The task of replacing the singed shingles by new ones and of restoring the overstuffed divan to its proper loca tion indoors goes by the name of reconstruction. It is a man-size job - a nation-size job. France has done it be fore. Caesar first made invasions of France popular, as every first-year high-school student ought to know. It is somewhat of an indictment of civilization that Caesar, operating nearly two thousand years ago, was the most constructive invader that France ever had to put up with, and that the hostile forces. Of 1914-1918 were the most de structive. But..
